

MISSION STATEMENT

The College of Fellows (COF), consisting of distinguished and recognized engineering leaders both within ACEC and their individual communities, shall enhance the image of the profession by undertaking activities including recognition programs, outreach through scholarship and unique educational opportunities. The College of Fellows strives to enhance the overall image of the consulting engineering profession through recognition of engineering accomplishments and continues to search out opportunities to serve ACEC member firms.

MEMBERSHIP

Candidates of the College of Fellows are nominated by peers through ACEC and its state member organizations for admittance based on demonstrated personal commitment, service, leadership, and enhancing the public image of the consulting engineering profession. Each candidate is evaluated and voted upon by the current Committee for inclusion based on the qualification requirements in ACEC Rules of Policies and Procedures, Articles VIII and their anticipated continued service to ACEC and engineering profession.

COF members are encouraged to volunteer as spokespersons for the engineering profession at local civic events, high schools and universities, and other venues that would provide opportunities to advance the profession.

COF members are encouraged to use "FACEC" on their letterhead and business cards.

APPLICATION FEES & DUES

The entire application fees from individuals and contributions received from firms are dedicated to the scholarship fund.

The annual dues are for operating expenses and COF events.
