Join us for the 2004 ACEC Annual Convention May 9–13 at The Broadmoor Resort—“The Grande Dame of the Rockies”

The 2004 Annual Convention features an exciting lineup of speakers, programs, and events all taking place at the majestic, five-star Broadmoor Resort. A new feature to this year’s convention will be

ACEC’s first “Conference-within-a-Conference,” focusing on diversity-related issues that are important in today’s engineering market. Attendees can take part in “diversity” sessions, indicated by a special icon in the convention brochure. On Monday, May 10, hear Opening General Session keynote speaker Dr. William Wulf, president of the National Academy of Engineering (NAE), discuss the need for diversity awareness and resulting business opportunities.

Other Convention Speakers Include ...

Tucker Carlson, considered one of the best political analysts in broadcast journalism as cohost of Crossfire, CNN’s provocative political debate program, will be the keynote luncheon speaker on Monday, May 10. Carlson provides insight and commentary “from the right,” offering audiences a spirited, candid and incisive look at today’s political events and a glimpse into what the people who run Washington are like when the cameras are off.

Awards Luncheon

Richard Fosbury will be the keynote speaker at the Awards Luncheon and Presentation on Tuesday, May 11. Fosbury is the former U.S. Olympian who won the gold medal at the 1968 Olympics by creating the backward layout high jump that became known as the “Fosbury Flop.” Now the co-owner and president of new ACEC member firm Galena Engineering, Inc., Fosbury will discuss what it takes to achieve that level of athletic excellence, the many lessons he learned as an Olympic athlete and how he has leveraged these same philosophies in his 25-plus year career in engineering and land surveying. Don’t miss the Awards Luncheon honoring the recipient of the Past

Chairmen’s Award, the Community Service Award winners, SEI graduates and Peer Reviewed Firms.
